“Don’t Tug on Superman’s Cape”
from In a Single Bound!
by Kyle Walker

CHARACTER – male, 20s-30s

SUPERMAN

You see this symbol on my chest? You know what it stands for? It stands for “S”. As in Superman. Now give me my cape back, bra’. This is totes not a good look for me. You see, I come from an alternate universe and whatnot. I was fighting Lex Luthor and he was all like “With my subatomic deregulator, I’ll destroy time” or some bullshit. So I flew faster than the speed of time and I was all like “BAM! Step off my timeline, douche-wad,” and I restored the space-time continuum and junk. And check it out: I flew so fast that I ripped through multiple dimensions and my cape got knocked loose and it fell down into your universe. Each universe has its own Superman. I’m just one of ‘em, bra’. You know, this is the first universe I’ve come across that doesn’t have any superheroes. But putting on my cape doesn’t make you Superman. Superman is someone who stands up for what’s right, inspires others to be more than themselves, and strives to make the world a better place. Someone like you, bra’. That’s like a moral or someshit. So give me my cape back so that I can up, up and... you know the rest.
